

FREELANCE STUDENT WRITERS, FRESHERED

Freshered is hiring new freelance writers for its expanding team. This role is a flexible part-time position for students, which can operate side-by-side with your studies.

Freshered is a student-centric website that focuses on all aspects of university life, from study skills to politics, social media to personal stories, entertainment to food and drink.

Are you graduating this year with aspirations of being a journalist? If so, we are looking for freelancers to write for us now, who could ultimately secure a full-time position next summer.

All freelance roles are paid positions and we encourage all our writers to bring their own ideas to the table, while also working alongside them to ensure they are confident in every story they write.

Applicants should have a good understanding of social media, including TikTok and viral trends. Experience writing for other publications is preferable but not necessary. We are looking for applicants with a strong voice and excellent journalistic skills.

The stories on Freshered are written by university students for university students, and we can't wait to welcome some new members to the team.
